

Don't Be A FawnNapper!

It's that time of year.

Don't be a fawnnapper!

It's very common for moms to leave babies for the day while they forage.

It's their hope that if they leave it near humans that it will help keep predators away.

Doe will often hide fawns near your home or even right outside your home.

This does not mean the baby is orphaned.

Please contact a licensed Rehabilitator before moving a fawn. (See <https://ahnow.org/#/>)

Unless they are crying, running around looking for the mom or showing signs of dehydration (curled ears) or hunger, they should be left alone.
